PROFILE

My name is Iliasse Bouatia, and I am a first-year engineering student specializing in computer science and networks at EMSI. I am passionate about everything related to data, development, and cybersecurity. I have a strong preference for self-learning and practical, hands-on experience, which allows me to develop skills independently and adapt quickly to new technologies. My goal is to become an expert in these fields by combining theory and practice to solve real-world challenges.
